In fact, you can try your hand at the experience of a cooking class, during which you will have to get involved in cooking what will be the delicacies then served during lunch.

The visit to the winery lasts about an hour and a half, a period in which, through a specially designed itinerary, you will first learn about the origin and historical-geographical characteristics of Franciacorta, so as to understand its importance in terms of wine vocation. Then, thanks to the passion that the oenologist or the cellar manager will transmit to you, you will get involved in what is the knowledge of Franciacorta wine and its processing phases, starting from the grape harvest to the production of a bottle, passing through the detailed description of the method, very similar to the one used for Champagne.

Finally, after an accurate explanation of the main characteristics of Franciacorta's bubbles, such as their acidity, perlage and freshness, you will end your visit with a tasty tasting of two/three glasses of this fantastic wine.

In the late afternoon you will check in at a farmhouse in the area, where you will have a dinner with a multi-course tasting menu and a bottle of Franciacorta and, on request, a cake to celebrate a special event.
